ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Finding Joy

PROGRAM NOTES BY MAGGIE MOLLOY

Let us feel it, let us heed it,
Let us seek its deepest kiss.
Let us live our brief lives mining
That which joy alone can give.
-From Tracy K. Smith's “Ode to Joy”

In a world increasingly dominated by computer screens, the concert hall remains one of the few precious places where the world slows down, puts away their phones, and gathers together in community. Where we take time to nourish the spirit, to listen deeply without distraction or interruption.

Tonight’s program features two works, past and present, which speak to the power of community. Jennifer Higdon’s blue cathedral is an eloquent reflection on the loss of a loved one, finding beauty in the connections, however brief, that bind us together in this “song called life.” Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony, with an adapted text by poet Tracy K. Smith, speaks to the torments of the inner world as much as the outer one—and ultimately chooses hope, in spite of suffering.

Both works find deep and profound community through music; both discover joy in times of darkness.

JENNIFER HIGDON

A glass cathedral in the sky, floating through the clouds— that’s the image Jennifer Higdon had in mind when she composed blue cathedral.

Blue, with its connotations of water, wisdom and life. Blue like the sky, where possibilities soar. The cathedral, a symbolic doorway from the physical to the spiritual world; a place of growth, connection and transformation.

She pictured the listener floating down the aisle, the cathedral’s stained-glass windows alive with heavenly music. She described a sense of quiet peace, floating upward, gradually giving way to “an ecstatic expansion of the soul.”

Higdon was inspired by the loss of her younger brother, Andrew Blue, who passed away in 1998 following his battle with skin cancer.

“Composing felt like hanging on to life,” she said. “Because it was something I knew, it was familiar. It gave me a grounding but also allowed my brain to focus on something that wasn’t completely engulfed in grief.” The composition process felt instinctive.

“Even parts of it are a mystery to me,” Higdon said. Years later, as she reflects on the 25th anniversary of the work, she’s still finding new connections in the music.

“It took me years to realize that Andy lived on Cathedral Street in Baltimore,” she said. And she remembers sitting together on Virginia Beach in the final weeks of his life, looking out at the big blue ocean when she told him she wanted to write a piece of music in his honor.

The loss of her brother made her reflect on the journeys we all make in our lives, learning and growing each step of the way, finding deep moments of connection—and letting go. In the wake of the pandemic, this message is especially poignant.

As she looks back over the past 25 years, she considers the connections she’s made in her own journey as a composer and educator; her students at the Curtis Institute of Music who inspired some of the solos in this piece; her dear friend of two decades Marin Alsop, who conducts tonight’s program. And she thinks of her connections with the growing audience, too. In the past 25 years, blue cathedral has been performed over a thousand times around the globe.

“I feel like the piece honestly belongs to the world now,” she said. “It doesn’t really belong to me; it belongs to everyone—because we’ve all had loss.”

In tribute to Andrew Blue, she features solos for his instrument, the clarinet, and hers, the flute.

Since she’s the older sibling, the flute appears first—but at the end of the piece, the flute drops out, and it’s the clarinet that continues upward into that ecstatic blue sky.
It’s a melody you’ve heard a million times—in cartoons, movies, TV ads, even as the occasional cell phone ringtone. Perhaps you plunked through it on the piano yourself as a little kid, or proudly piped it out on the recorder in your elementary school music class.

It’s the famous “Ode to Joy,” a beacon of light bursting forth in the glorious finale of Ludwig van Beethoven’s Symphony No. 9 in D minor. A melody so ubiquitous that we sometimes forget its powerful message: a triumph of the human spirit over darkness and division. An ode to freedom, peace, and unity.

The message rings as true today as it did over two centuries ago when Beethoven composed it—though the specific challenges that divide us may have changed. Beethoven was writing at a time of immense political turmoil. He came of age amid the American and French Revolutions, and his career unfolded alongside the rise and fall of Napoleon and the restructuring of Europe. Today we likewise find our world at war: violence, hate and greed ravaging not only our people, but our planet.

The original text for Beethoven’s “Ode to Joy” comes from Friedrich Schiller’s 1785 poem of the same name, an anthem of brotherhood on Earth praising the almighty Creator above. On tonight’s program, we hear a new adaptation from the pen of former U.S. Poet Laureate Tracy K. Smith.

Smith’s version takes a more global approach.

“Because there is so much about cosmology in the original, I wanted to think about heavenly bodies—we live on one,” she said in an interview at Carnegie Hall. “So I was thinking about the Earth as an entity, a living presence. And it was exciting to address the Earth at the end—to ask forgiveness, to ask for some kind of guidance.”

The poem was commissioned by Carnegie Hall in celebration of the 250th anniversary of Beethoven’s birth. It was part of a yearlong project titled All Together: A Global Ode to Joy, which invited artists from across disciplines and around the world to reimagine Beethoven’s message for a 21st century audience.

For Smith, it was crucial that her adaptation speak to the urgent issues of today.

“My poem thinks about the planet,” she said. “It thinks about the disaster that climate change has brought about. It’s thinking also about division, violence, fear that we see and sometimes perpetuate. I was excited to be able to work with things that felt so real and pressing, and to be able to ask them to help me get to something joyful.”

How we create and share joy in community with one another is at the heart of Smith’s poem—and at the heart of Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony as well. When it premiered in 1824, Beethoven’s call for equality, freedom, and brotherhood was radical. So, too, was his music.
The Ninth Symphony was bigger and bolder than any that had come before it. Not only did Beethoven’s score call for massive instrumental forces, but it was also the first time a major composer featured a chorus and vocal soloists in a symphony. The addition of voices in the finale was revolutionary: it expanded the possibilities of the symphony forever. The movements were also longer and more complex; at every turn, he played with the limits of form and subverted audiences’ expectations.

These innovations were emblematic of Beethoven’s artistic ethos. Instead of struggling to squeeze big emotions into the established structures of the Classical era, he reconfigured the orchestra to accommodate the breadth of his creative vision.

Beethoven’s music helped usher in the new Romantic era: music that was deeply rooted in nature and in the human experience. The Romantics valued imagination and emotion over logic and reason, freedom and self-expression over clarity and form.

History remembers Beethoven as the first composer to consider himself a capital-A “Artist”: someone with a singular voice and vision, like a prophet who sees and hears what others cannot and who reveals these higher truths to the world through his music. (Who can forget the famous Beethoven quote? “There are and there will be thousands of princes—but there is only one Beethoven.”)

The notion of the artist as a hero was a prevalent theme in Beethoven’s work, and it would go on to become a hallmark of the Romantic era. As the political revolutions of the 18th century unfolded, people were aspiring for freedom and self-determination—and Beethoven translated that aspiring spirit to music.

The Ninth Symphony likewise unfolds like a journey from darkness to light. The drama and vigor of the first movement evokes chaos coming into focus: for many listeners, the music conjures up myths of creation, the Big Bang, or even the hero’s cry to battle.

The menacing character of the second movement belies the traditional meaning of scherzo, which is Italian for “joke.” Beethoven’s scherzo whirls and twirls with reckless abandon—at times dancing dangerously close to the edge.

We catch our breath and regain our footing in the third movement: a quiet stroll through a garden, the melodies in bloom. The sense of inward peace expands outward in brief, brassy fanfares, anticipating the elation of the final movement.

At a sprawling 24 minutes in length, the finale has been described as a symphony within a symphony. The immortal “Ode to Joy” theme is whispered around the orchestra before it finds its full-throated expression, the excitement building to a grand entrance: the baritone soloist, center stage, proclaiming words of exultation. Community builds around this single voice: like a candle lighting a new flame, the melody swells as it is passed around the instruments and chorus. Soloists add color and dimension, the symphony ultimately culminating in the joyous triumph of the human spirit.

Beethoven couldn’t hear the rapturous applause that greeted the symphony at its premiere. In fact, he was still conducting after the piece had ended. One of the soloists had to turn him around so that he could see the audience on their feet.

Beethoven was almost completely deaf when he composed his Ninth Symphony, but he was passionate about bringing this music out of his head and into the world. While the performance was officially conducted by Michael Umlauf, Beethoven provided his own spirited direction from alongside him.

“He stood in front of a conductor’s stand and threw himself back and forth like a madman,” the violinist Joseph Böhm recalled after the premiere. “At one moment he stretched to his full height, at the next he crouched down to the floor, he flailed about with his hands and feet as though he wanted to play all the instruments and sing all the chorus parts.”

The audience responded to Beethoven's fervor. The finale was greeted with a standing ovation, the audience waving all manner of hats, hands, and handkerchiefs in the air so that Beethoven could see their enthusiastic applause, even if he could not hear it.

Those in the audience that night could not have imagined the lasting impact Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony would have on the world of music—not to mention its influence on how music is consumed. Legend has it that when Philips and Sony created the very first CD in the 1980s, it was designed to have a 74-minute playing time specifically to accommodate a full performance of Beethoven’s Ninth.

As for the lasting influence of Beethoven's message: his “Ode to Joy” continues to resonate in its complexity. Here was an artist who was tormented for years by his encroaching deafness, who isolated himself from society, who was at times suicidal and cut off from the world around him—and yet, this symphony carries with it a resounding message of hope.

These nuances are echoed in Smith’s adaptation of the poem, which brings a contemporary lens to the universal search for joy.

“Joy is a gift, but it’s also a kind of choice—or a sacrifice, even,” she said in the Carnegie Hall interview. “I think about joy as something that we have to seek, make space for, welcome. And that is harder and bigger than happiness.”

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

Marin Alsop, NOI+F Music Director

One of the foremost conductors of our time, Marin Alsop represents a powerful and inspiring voice. Convinced that music has the power to change lives, she is internationally recognized for her innovative approach to programming and audience development, deep commitment to education, and championing of music’s importance in the world. The first woman to serve as the head of a major orchestra in the United States, South America, Austria and Britain, she is, as The New York Times put it, not only “a formidable musician and a powerful communicator” but also “a conductor with a vision.”

The 2023-2024 Season marks Alsop’s fifth as Chief Conductor of the ORF Vienna Radio Symphony Orchestra, which she leads at Vienna’s Musikverein and Konzerthaus, as well as on recordings, broadcasts and international tours; her first as Artistic Director & Chief Conductor of the Polish National Radio Symphony; and her first as Principal Guest Conductor of London’s Philharmonia Orchestra. She also holds positions as Chief Conductor of the Ravinia Festival, where she curates and conducts the Chicago Symphony Orchestra’s annual summer residency and as the first Music Director of the National Orchestral Institute + Festival (NOI+F) at the University of Maryland, where she launched a new academy for young conductors and leads the NOI Philharmonic each June.

A full decade after becoming the first female conductor of London’s Last Night of the Proms, Alsop made history again in September 2023, as both the first woman and the first American to guest conduct three Last Nights in the festival’s 128-year history. In Spring 2024, she made her company debut at The Metropolitan Opera, leading John Adams’s oratorio El Niño in a fully staged new production starring Julia Bullock and Davóne Tines. Other 2023-2024 highlights include a new production of Bernstein’s Candide with the ORF Vienna Radio Symphony, an all-American program to inaugurate her four-season Philharmonia appointment, Penderecki’s seldom-heard opera The Black Mask with the Polish National Radio Symphony, and returns to the podiums of the Orchestre Philharmonique de Radio France and Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra.

In 2021, Alsop assumed the title of Music Director Laureate and OrchKids Founder of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, which she continues to conduct each season. During her outstanding 14-year tenure as its Music Director, she led the orchestra on its first European tour in 13 years, released multiple award-winning recordings, and conducted more than two dozen world premieres, as well as founding OrchKids, its groundbreaking music education program for Baltimore’s most disadvantaged youth. In 2019, after seven years as Music Director, Alsop became Conductor of Honour of Brazil’s São Paulo Symphony Orchestra (OSESP), with which she continues to undertake major projects each season. Deeply committed to new music, she was Music Director of California’s Cabrillo Festival of Contemporary Music for 25 years, leading 174 premieres.
Alsop has longstanding relationships with the London Philharmonic and London Symphony Orchestras, and regularly guest conducts such major international ensembles as The Cleveland Orchestra, New York Philharmonic, The Philadelphia Orchestra, Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, Budapest Festival Orchestra and Orchestre de Paris, besides leading the La Scala Orchestra, Royal Concertgebouw and others. In collaboration with YouTube and Google Arts & Culture, she spearheaded the “Global Ode to Joy” (GOTJ), a crowd-sourced video project to celebrate Beethoven’s 250th anniversary in 2020.

Recognized with BBC Music “Album of the Year” and Emmy nominations in addition to Grammy, Classical BRIT and Gramophone awards, Alsop’s discography comprises more than 200 titles. These include recordings for Decca, Harmonia Mundi and Sony Classical, as well as her acclaimed Naxos cycles of Brahms with the London Philharmonic, Dvořák with the Baltimore Symphony and Prokofiev with the São Paulo Symphony. Recent releases include a live account of Candide with the London Symphony Orchestra & Chorus; a Kevin Puts collection with the Baltimore Symphony; and the first installment of a complete Schumann symphonic cycle for Naxos with the Vienna RSO.

The first and only conductor to receive a MacArthur Fellowship, Alsop has also been honored with the World Economic Forum’s Crystal Award. Amongst many other awards and academic positions, she served as both 2021-2022 Harman/Eisner Artist-in-Residence of the Aspen Institute Arts Program and 2020 Artist-in-Residence at Vienna’s University of Music and Performing Arts; is Director of Graduate Conducting at the Johns Hopkins University’s Peabody Institute; and holds Honorary Doctorates from Yale University and The Juilliard School. To promote and nurture the careers of her fellow female conductors, in 2002 she founded the Taki Concordia Conducting Fellowship, which was renamed in her honor as the Taki Alsop Conducting Fellowship in 2020. The Conductor, a documentary about her life, debuted at New York’s 2021 Tribeca Film Festival and has subsequently been broadcast on PBS television, screened at festivals and in theaters nationwide, and recognized with the Naples International Film Festival’s 2021 Focus on the Arts Award.
Praised for her “big, beautifully projected voice with an attractive edge and sparkle” (Arts Knoxville), soprano Adia Evans is making her mark on the opera and concert world. Heritage Signature Chorale

The Heritage Signature Chorale is committed to preserving, at the highest possible level, the performance art traditions of African-American choral music, especially the Negro Spiritual; to elevating the African-American singer and composer in all musical genres; and to bringing a unique interpretation of classical music from America, Europe and other regions of the world.

Founded in 2000 by Stanley Thurston, The Heritage Signature Chorale (HSC) is an independent Washington, D.C.-based choral arts organization. It is made up of 85 volunteer choristers and a roster of professional singers, pianists, associate and guest conductors; serving demographics throughout the District, Maryland and Virginia (DMV).

Heritage began its 24th season with a performance of Once: In Memoriam Martin Luther King, Jr. with the New Dominion Chorale under the direction of Thomas Beveridge. This was followed by performances with the NSO Pops for “A Holiday Pops with Norm Lewis” at The Kennedy Center in December 2023.

Highlights from recent seasons include performing as the Chorus with the NSO Pops, in a film screening of the movie “Get Out,” at The John F. Kennedy Center Concert Hall and performing Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony with the NSO for the opening of the Kennedy Center REACH. HSC also performed Leonard Bernstein’s Mass, with Will Liverman and the National Symphony Orchestra, as part of the 50th Anniversary Celebration of the Opening of The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, R. Nathaniel Dett’s The Ordering of Moses, in collaboration with the IN Series, in Washington, D.C. and Adolphus Hailstork’s Done Made My Vow with the Cathedral Choral Society.

During the COVID-19 Pandemic, HSC offered 20 Virtual Stage programs. They also began an exciting artistic partnership, “I, Too, Sing America,” with the Cathedral Choral Society. As part of this partnership, they hosted a collaborative performance with the Cathedral Choral Society (Washington National Cathedral) and offered virtual performances and panel discussions in recognition of Black History, including a presentation with the Prince George’s Department of Parks and Recreation History. Their second I, Too, Sing America episode was a virtual performance, “Spirituals: The Mother Music,” presenting a video-recorded documentary with HSC, including performances of the Negro Spirituals Steal Away, arr. Roland Carter, Daniel, Daniel, Servant of the Lord, arr. Undine Smith Moore, and other favorites. A special highlight was performing Porgy & Bess: A Concert of Songs with the NSO Pops, with Steven Reineke, Alicia Hall Mora and Norm Lewis.

The Chorale provides a venue for showcasing artists, composers and arrangers who share our commitment, thereby fostering community awareness and appreciation of this important legacy. We envision a new generation of listeners who will understand and appreciate the historical legacy of the Negro Spiritual through education and performance.

* DENOTES NOI+F ALUMNI
Equity Arc is committed to building equity and dismantling discriminatory practices in classical music. NOI+F works with Equity Arc to simplify the summer program application process, allowing rising musicians to have access to more options for study.

Howard County Youth Orchestras and NOI join together for an annual partnership starting this summer. HCYO students will spend a day at NOI working side-by-side with NOI musicians in rehearsals, sectionals and a special side-by-side performance.

MARYLAND OPERA STUDIO

Continuing their artistic partnership, NOI+F will partner with the Maryland Opera Studio in a performance of Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony led by NOI+F Music Director Marin Alsop.

Network for Diversity in Concert Percussion

The Network for Diversity in Concert Percussion (NDCP) supports aspiring professional percussionists from underrepresented and underserved communities. Through this collaboration, the NDCP sponsors their Emerging Artists to apply and audition for NOI+F. Upon admission, one student will receive a full tuition scholarship, transportation, food stipends and complimentary housing.

National Gallery of Art

In partnership with the National Gallery of Art, members of the NOI Philharmonic will present a chamber music experience for gallery visitors during the 2024 Festival.

Maryland Opera Studio

Through this multi-year partnership with Naxos Records, the world’s leading classical musical label, NOI+F musicians record a yearly album of American music that is released in over 40 countries. They recently earned a Grammy nomination in the “Best Orchestral Performance” category for 2019 recording “Ruggles, Stucky, Harbison.”

PACIFIC MUSIC INSTITUTE

The National Orchestral Institute + Festival and Hawaii Youth Symphony partnered in 2019 to create the Orchestral Learning Alliance (OLA) at the Pacific Music Institute to take NOI+F students, faculty and alumni to Honolulu to serve as teachers and mentors to Hawaii’s young orchestral musicians.
The Smithsonian Chamber Music Society partners with NOI+F to create access for select orchestral fellows to receive access to and perform with historically significant musical instruments from the past 400 years.

Sound Mind, formerly known as Classical Musicians Roundtable, cultivates mental wellness in classical music. Through seminars, conversations and workshops, they empower musicians to be vulnerable and hold space for one another.

In partnership with the National Philharmonic and The Sphinx Organization, NOI+F hosts an annual fellowship and residency program that combines arts administration, orchestral performance, music curation and community engagement—culminating in an annual engagement project in the community and a professional residency with the National Philharmonic at Strathmore.

Taki Alsop Conducting Fellowship

The Taki Alsop Conducting Fellowship mentors, supports and promotes women conductors through intensive coaching, mentorship and financial support. Today, 19 out of 30 recipients hold music director or chief conductor positions. As part of NOI+F, a Taki Alsop recipient will be in residence during the summer.

AIE partners with NOI+F to provide space for design thinkers and musicians to collaborate in pushing the margins of what the symphony might become.

Washington National Cathedral

As part of the 2024 Festival, the NOI Philharmonic will perform Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony and Jennifer Higdon’s blue cathedral under the direction of NOI+F Music Director Marin Alsop.

Wolf Trap Opera

Wolf Trap Opera’s UNTRAPPED series, in partnership with NOI+F, takes thrilling vocal music to spaces beyond the company’s Northern Virginia home. With the NOI Philharmonic, these talented vocalists have performed Maurice Ravel’s L’heure espagnole, George Gershwin’s Porgy and Bess and Leonard Bernstein’s Songfest.
