DEKELBOUM CONCERT HALL
at The Clarice
This song depicts a young girl playing with a colorful parasol among butterflies on a sunny spring afternoon. It also includes another well-known children's song, Toryanse (Pass Along).

Second koto: Jackie Lee, Keiko O’Rourke, Chang Xu Pang
Bass koto: Yuriko Gandolfo, Cole Sousa
Sangen: Colin Khem, Sachiko Smith, Seori Stephens
Shakuhachi: Nicholas Mangialardi
Vocal: Eriko Murray

INTERMISSION

This is a sankyoku (koto/sangen/shakuhachi) arrangement of a classical Japanese kabuki dance with the same title. Various facets of a young maiden in love are depicted in this story, and the maiden ultimately transforms into a demonic serpent when she is consumed by deep hatred for the priest who has rejected her love.

First koto: Yuriko Gandolfo, Mizuki Hamada, Colin Khem, Jackie Lee
Second koto: Tiffany Harris, Keiko O’Rourke, Kyoko Okamoto, Chang Xu Pang
Sangen: Sachiko Smith
Shakuhachi: Nicholas Mangialardi, Jon Kenzen McCollum

There are multiple words for wind, depending on the season and weather patterns. The composer describes various characteristics of the wind in this five-part (two koto parts, bass koto, sangen, and shakuhachi) ensemble.

First koto: Kyoko Okamoto, Chang Xu Pang
Second koto: Yuriko Gandolfo, Jackie Lee
Bass koto: Colin Khem
Sangen: Sachiko Smith
Shakuhachi: Nicholas Mangialardi

This piece depicts the life of cranes, from their arrival through the north of Japan to their departure with the newborn birds. This migration symbolizes parents’ love for their offspring, the cycle of life, and longevity.

Shakuhachi: Jon Kenzen McCollum
8) Nami (Waves) ........................................................... Kikushiro Masaaki, comp. 1976

The blind koto master portrays the sound of waves as they come rolling in from the ocean.

First koto: Zainab Abdul-Rahim, Yuriko Gandolfo, Mizuki Hamada, Jackie Lee, Keiko O’Rourke, Chang Xu Pang, Sachiko Smith, Cole Sousa
Second koto: Maiko Daizen, Tiffany Harris, Toya Jackson, Kyoko Okamoto, Daryl Floyd, Seori Stephens
Bass koto: Colin Khem

Greetings from the Ambassador of Japan

I am delighted to welcome you to the 47th Annual Japanese Spring Koto Recital presented by the University of Maryland Japanese Koto Ensemble and Washington Toho Koto Society.

Koto music is a beloved art form in Japan, evoking for many listeners images of natural seasonal beauty. Spring is a perfect time to enjoy koto music, which brings to mind beautiful cherry blossoms in full bloom and a sense of renewal.

One hundred seven years ago, Japan gifted the United States 3,000 cherry blossom trees. They remain an enduring symbol of the longstanding friendship between our two countries. Like the cherry blossom trees, koto brings the American and Japanese people closer together through music and continues to enrich our friendship.

I commend the members of the Washington Toho Koto Society and the students and faculty at the University of Maryland for their incredible work and dedicated efforts in presenting this annual recital and promoting cultural exchange through koto music. I hope you all enjoy this wonderful occasion.

- Shinsuke J. Sugiyama, Ambassador of Japan

ABOUT THE KOTO

The Koto, or “so,” produces an evocative sound recognized in Japanese cultural surveys as the most distinctively Japanese voice in Japan’s spectrum of musical instruments. The six-foot-long board zither is made of paulownia (kiri) wood with movable bridges supporting the thirteen strings that are plucked with three ivory picks worn on the right hand. The left hand also manipulates the strings to create more varied sounds. A Japanese precursor to the koto was produced in prehistoric times, but this more elaborate zither was introduced from China and Korea by the eighth century. In the mid-seventeenth century, the koto moved beyond use by courtier, priest, and scholar to become a popular instrument.

Today’s concert will also feature the shakuhachi, an end-blown bamboo flute associated with Zen Buddhism, and the sangen or shamisen, a three-stringed plucked lute used to accompany many kinds of vocal music and kabuki theatre.

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND JAPANESE KOTO ENSEMBLE

The performers are students from the University of Maryland Japanese Koto Ensemble classes (MUSC 129K, 129L, 629K, 629L). They are directed by Kyoko Okamoto, a native of Japan, who graduated from Kyoto University of Foreign Studies and is a certified teacher of the Ikuta School of Koto. She has studied with Kazue Ehara of Ashiya, Japan, and has been teaching koto at UMD since 1973.

ERIKO TOKURA MURRAY, SOPRANO
A native of Japan, Eriko Tokura Murray began her singing career at the age of 10, performing with the Mizushima Boys and Girls Choir as a soloist. While Ms. Murray was living in Sri Lanka, she sang with the Sri Lanka Symphony Orchestra and Chamber Music Society Colombo, and performed two premier contemporary pieces for “voice and strings” at the official residence of the Sri Lankan President. Since moving to Washington DC in 2010, she has joined the 7 Sopranos production which was invited to sing at Carnegie Hall in 2013. She also founded the Children’s “Kodomo Chorus” and produced the Japanese a cappella group “KIMONOdSisters.” With these groups, Ms. Murray sang at various venues such as George Mason University, the Kennedy Center, and the Embassy of Japan. She has been a music director at Washington Japanese Heritage Center since March 2017.

SACHIKO SMITH, SANGEN
She has studied the koto since 1985 with Kyoko Okamoto and performed with the Washington Toho Koto Society since that time. In 1998, she received the stage name of Kitagawa Yukiji for sangen from the Kitagawa School in Tokyo, Japan. She also obtained her teacher’s certificate for sangen in 2001.
